

ABSTRACT

A scan diagnosis circuit is constructed to avoid a hold violation by connecting the scan chains so as to flow scan data in the direction opposite to the direction of propagation of a clock signal to accelerate the transition of the clock signal with respect to the scan test data, and by increasing the resistance in the return path beyond that in the clock signal transmission path to delay the data transfer in the return path.